HUNDREDS TRAPPED IN FIRE

VIENNA, April 18.—UP— The death toll in a church fire at Costeshti Rumania tonight, had reached 150 and was mounting as details of the tragedy reached here.

The burgomaster was among those reported dead as fire trapped hundreds attending evening Easter services.

The wooden building blazed like paper as the congregation inside, screamed and stormed the door in vain.

Candles Cause Blaze

Most of the adult population of the tiny village had gone to the church for Good Friday services.

Candles, lighted as part of the service, ignited heavy curtains in the church.

The people rushed in panic towards the doors, which opened inward.

Bodies Piled

The first to reach the doors were crushed against them by the surging mass of worshippers behind.

There was a pileup of bodies against the doors, easy prey to the raging flames.

All the prominent people of the village were at the service, but it was understood the majority of victims were women and children. Two priests were listed among the known dead.

MACHINE GUNS, POLICE GUARD AGAINST JERUSALEM RIOTING

JERUSALEM, April 18. —(UP) —Machine guns and Aimee Semple McPherson had prominent places today as this ancient city rang to the religious observance of Arabs, Christians and Jews.

Automobiles equipped with machine guns, together with mounted police, were stationed at strategic points to prevent clashes, for the Christians conducted their Holy Week activities the Moslem Arabs made pilgrimage to the tomb of Moses at Nebbi Moussa, and the Jews held Passover.

Thousands of Christians passed through the narrow streets of he old city this afternoon, chanting hymns, recalling the trial and execution of Christ about 19 centuries ago.

Mrs. McPherson, who led a group of Los Angeles disciples here for the Holy Week event, stood on David's tower with her daughter, Roberta, and watched the Moslem pilgrims returning from Nebbi Moussa.

"I have realized the greatest dream of my life," she said.

The government cut her stay here until Monday, when she will lead her pilgrims to Syria. Detectives accompanied her everywhere today.

Th local daily, "Palestine Bulletin," commented on the evangelist's visit as follows:

"No woman in the world ever hit poor Satan between the eyes so often as Mrs. McPherson. The Devil must expect a few knocks in the Holy Land. Mrs. McPherson is very beautiful which makes the Devil writhe all the more, for he expects a kiss and gets a kick."

PACT WILL BE SIGNED TUESDAY

LONDON, April 18.—UP— The main parts of the naval treaty of 1930, which is to be signed here next Tuesday, were cabled today to the governments of Washington, Paris, Rome and Tokio.

Replies are expected by Monday, containing any suggested changes in wording. Particular interest centers on whether Tokio will accept the "safeguarding clause" drafted in the three-power portion of the treaty. The clause permits increased building by the United States, Great Britain and Japan if the security or any of the three nations is threatened from outside.

Some speculation has arisen as to the application of this clause with respect to destroyers. Great Britain has specified it must have permission to increase its quota of 150,000 tons of destroyers if France completes its projected 100,000 tons of submarines. For every 100 tons of increase in British destroyer tonnage, the United States will be permitted to build 100 tons and Japan 70.

But the three power treaty also gives permission to any signatory to transfer 20 percent of its destroyer tonnage to the light cruiser division. Whether this transfer privilege would apply to any increased tonnage under the safeguarding clause was not made clear by any of the delegates.

All the chief delegates were out of the city today, sharing in the

FIRE PROBED IN MURDER QUIZ

LOS ANGELES, April 18.—UP— Investigation of a fire which swept the Oesterreich Garment factory in Milwaukee in 1927 was added today to the questioning of Mrs. Walburga Oesterreich and Otto Sanhuber, jointly indicted in the death eight years ago of the woman's husband.

Deputy District Attorney Daniel Beecher said that Sanhuber had given him startling information concerning an arson ring "which is ready to do business with anyone for a consideration." Beecher said Sanhuber's information was very valuable.

The source of Sanhuber's information concerning the alleged ring was not revealed by Beecher nor were the details of the statement.

The quiz was started locally by Captain Haguewood of the fire prevention bureau of the fire department and Phil S. Corcoran, state insurance department official.

Sanhuber and Mrs. Oesterreich were indicted yesterday in the death of the woman's husband, Fred Oesterreich. The man assertedly confessed that he loved Mrs. Oesterreich, lived in the attic of her home without the husband's knowledge and crept out one night and murdered him. However, he claimed the shooting was in self defense when Oesterreich, surprised by his presence, moved to attack.

The contract for the work was awarded to the San Francisco bridge company yesterday. The company presented a bid to do the work for 15.5 cents per cubic yard, or a total of $262,124.65, based upon an estimate of the amount of material to be moved.

Judge Story On Shooting Differs

STOCKTON, April 18. —(UP) —Municipal Judge Grover Frioux 38, critically injured by a revolver shot yesterday, today persistently stuck to the story that the gun accidentally exploded in his pocket, although police could not find any trace of the weapon, which he said he threw away, before he was found near a roadhouse, and removed to a hospital.

Complicating the shooting case, was the knowledge of police that Frioux had just made a payment on a secret insurance policy which his wife did not know existed.

The judge refused to give any details of the time and place of the shooting, and the police are at a loss to know whether or not someone whom the judge is trying to shield actually was responsible for firing the shot which may prove fatal to the jurist.

WORKERS TO END COUNT SOON

Richmond has been granted additional time for the census count, according to an announcement made by city officials yesterday, following receipt of a message from Edward A. Dinkelspiel, supervisor of the census for this district.

The exact period of time extended to the city is not known. Dinkelspeil stated, however, that enumerators will continue to finish up their districts until he gives the word to them to quit.

Richmond is not the only city that is experiencing difficulty in completing its census. Every city in this district is having the same trouble, it was stated.

It was stated yesterday that the figures tabulated at Dinkelspiel's offices on Tuesday give this city a population of 18,000.

But, however, it is expected that the figures will be far in advance of this number when the final count is tabulated.

It is hoped by city officials that the count here will pass the 20,000 mark.

Residents were warned by officials yesterday that they should get in touch with the city clerk's office at Richmond 383 if they have not been counted in the census.

GREEN FIRES

MARGUERITE MOOERS MARSHALL

Spring comes a vagrant, haggard and bare,
Hiding in corners from winter's glare,
Lonesome and friendless, tattered, forlorn,
But bearing green fires to kindle at dawn.

Winter holds wassail deep in the night,
Frozen lights glitter through castles white.
Winter's a boaster, little he knows,
The beggar's green fires will melt all his snows.

Soft blows the south wind, warming the land,
Winter feels warning, howls for his band,
Strikes with the north wind, scatters fresh snows,
But, icy heart melting, fast routed he goes.

Spring reigns gay conqueror, glorious is he
Flaunting green banners from sea to sea,
Swagg'ring, appareled bright, treasures untold,
Yesterday's beggar goes mighty and bold.

Babies Set to Rhyme

WHETHER the mother of a baby can attend to any other job is one of the hour's hottest arguments about women. A mother now offers a new contribution to the subject. She is Mrs. Esther L. Schwartz, a contributor to this column, and she has solved the problem of taking care of her babies and "expressing herself" by making her own children the subject of her book of verses, "Parents Prefer Babies," published to-morrow. Any mother who has struggled with "formulas," baby specialists, "crying it out" and all the other cosmic questions of childhood, will chuckle sympathetically over Mrs. Schwartz's realistic rhymes, dedicated "to my little sons, Laskar and Anthony."

This slender book indeed represents the double contribution—to the race and to current literature—of two women. Like the author of the verses, Mrs. Schwartz, their illustrator, Mrs. Mary Field Terrel, has combined work and pleasure in presenting to the public the joyous good times to be found in the arduous job of motherhood. The poet made the subject of her poems her babies. The artist made hers the models for her drawings.

Mrs. Schwartz, a brown-eyed, smiling, attractive young woman, found delightful material at hand in the daily duties with her youngsters. Realizing that mothers are inarticulate about the things which concern them most deeply, she tried to put down, from her own experience, the things every mother thinks and feels. Everything the baby did, every gay or profound thought she had about him, were expressed in light verse designed to make other mothers say, "That's just the way it happened with me!"

Sleepless nights, drudgery, the long, hard day and the dull evenings while baby slept but mother was unable to get out because of him, the welcome or unwelcome criticism of relatives or friends, all became material for verse.

WHEN it came to be time to illustrate the book, Mrs. Terrel did not need to go far for models. Her own little babies and those of a friend or two were right at hand and utterly adorable.

So, between soup and pot roast, between changing the babies and preparing their vegetables, between marketing and baking and cooking and kissing bruised knees and soothing wounded feelings, these two mothers contrived to write and illustrate the challenge they wanted to throw out to the world, "Parents Prefer Babies."

"It's a tremendous job," as Mrs. Schwartz admits, "but what real woman would shirk it?"

Her little volume is proof that one can be a competent, conscientious mother and do other things, too. Being tied down was not, in the case of Mrs. Schwartz and Mrs. Terrel, used as an excuse for doing nothing. On the contrary, they used their simple little joys and responsibilities as a motif for work outside their babies, and by combining the two, gave to their readers a rarely intimate bit of life as every mother lives it.

WE QUOTE two bits from Mrs. Schwartz's book. What mother has not been haunted by the thought expressed in the following stanzas?

WHAT IF I DIED?

I lie awake at night and think for hours,
I worry needlessly, though some may doubt me;
What if to-morrow brings some fatal illness?
What would my little baby do without me?

When everything goes well and we're so happy,
Why should my heart be filled with sudden dread?
He seems so little and so frail and helpless;
What would my baby do if I were dead?

And here is a job and a mood which every modern mother will greet with a reminiscent chuckle:

THE VEGETABLES

Spinach and carrots, carrots and spinach,
I cook them until I'm tired;
Carrots and spinach, spinach and carrots,
Foods that I've never admired.

Clean them and peel them, cook them and mash them,
Watch baby make a wry face;
Fix them and mix them, dice them and rice them;
I'm glad that I'm not in his place!

Hague Compromise Is All Women Win.—Headline.

This succinct summary of what women have achieved at The Hague conference for the codification of international law reminds us of the famous case of the man who wanted to go to the mountains for the summer, while his wife wanted to go to the shore—so they compromised on the shore!

Now that President Hoover has set the example of a stag week-end spring fishing trip, we wonder how many other husbands are going to get away with it!

Housecleaning Suggestions

To match plastering mix two parts each of ashes and sand and one part flour, with sufficient water to make it of proper consistency, and fill this into the broken portions.

If the wax shows a tendency to become solid while being applied to the floor it must be liquified with turpentine to avoid a sticky finish, and be sure to allow a waxed floor to dry for several hours before polishing it.

To clean the windows quickly use two chamois skins; use one wet for the actual cleaning and dry with the second one. The windows will not be streaked and there will be no lint to pick or brush off.

A DISH A DAY

By Karen Hollis

Copyright Press Publishing Company (New York World) 1930

Sometimes a glance at the morning mail reminds me that a great many housewives are struggling to prepare meals on a small stove. There are so many requests for combination dinners that can be prepared on a small electric grill or in a miniature oven!

Often there is the added stipulation that the housewife has limited time at her disposal. How can she depart from the old standbys of steak or cutlet or chops, when she prepares dinner after hurrying home from an office?

KAREN HOLLIS

To such homemakers, savory ragouts and pot roasts are delicacies to be enjoyed only on Sunday, when there is unlimited time at their disposal. And cooked vegetables to accompany meat are out of the question, one correspondent assures me, when one has only a single burner on which to cook.

This is not such a hardship as it may appear to be on first thought. A profusion of vegetables can be combined in a salad, but even better than that, certain vegetables can be cooked with the meat in a mixed grill. The number and variety of foods in a mixed grill are limited only by the size of the grill itself.

Here is an ideal combination which is just as appealing to the housewife who has a regular-sized stove as it is to the one who depends on a small one. It can be cooked either in oven or broiler.

MIXED GRILL WITH SAVORY SAUCE

Kidneys
Lamb chops
Bacon
Diced potatoes
Tomatoes stuffed with rice and country sausage
Celery

Cut the fat off the lamb chops and heat nutil the pan is thoroughly greased.

Place the chops, kidneys and diced potatoes in the pan and place in the broiler or oven. While they are cooking, hollow out tomatoes and stuff with equal parts of boiled rice and country sausage. Wash and split young stalks of celery. When the lamb chops are ready to turn, place the tomatoes and celery in the pan, and lay strips of bacon over the chops and kidneys. Return to the fire and cook until skins of the tomatoes are wrinkled and meat is done.

Place the ingredients of the mixed grill on a hot platter and brown two tablespoons of flour in the fat. Add one-half cup of catsup, or four tablespoons of Worcestershire or some other savory seasoning. Add boiling water to make gravy of desired consistency, and serve.

Mushrooms can be added to this mixed grill, and if pork chops are used in place of lamb, grilled apples are an ideal accompaniment.

Modernizing the Home

Up-to-Date Rooms for Little Folks

By Alma Zaiss

PROBLEM NO. 1

Dear Miss Zaiss:

Can you perhaps suggest the arrangement and color treatment for the inclosed sketches? No. 1 represents one of my bedrooms. No. 2 the third room. They comprise a room for myself and husband—one for my young son—and the nursery. They all receive good light and cross-ventilation and may be used interchangeably.

The children's room we will furnish anew. Our own room comprises double four-post bed, man's chest, woman's bureau, vanity dressing table, Martha Washington high-back chair and sewing table in mahogany and Early American maple reproductions of good quality. (MRS. C. C. H.)

Simplicity and Convenience Achieved in Attractive Ways

Copyright Press Publishing Company (New York World) 1930

MERELY to contemplate two large, light, sunny rooms planned just for children must prove fascinating to those who have managed to content themselves with the smaller-and-smaller dwellings prescribed for us by modern landlords. And if to-day's story doesn't inspire at least half a dozen couples to rush right out to the suburbs to find a real home for themselves "and family"—we shall be deeply disappointed.

After all, we may be proud of our cars, our baby grands and superradios. But all the pleasure they can give us during their lifetime will never equal the thrill that follows the possession of a really truly home—a house with gardens; windows flung wide to the sun; a real kitchen; and, above all, adequate room for little folks as they come along.

We have received two very interesting letters which ask for recommendations for children's rooms and we are pleased to treat both in one problem. Strangely, in the child's room illustrated in the second Evening World booklet, "Good Furniture—Old and New" there are many interesting features which could be adapted for both problems, and so this picture has been used for to-day's double-story. The changes necessary to provide every comfort and convenience for each room will be noted by reference to the two different floor plans.

Considering Mrs. H.'s problem first: at either side of the jutting chimney in her room there is an ideal space for arched cupboards such as we see illustrated in the picture. Aside from being extremely decorative when filled with colorful toys, books and bric-a-brac, built-in shelves and cupboards of this type are wonderful incentives to neatness.

In our mind's eye we visualize this room with papered walls—perhaps a modern juvenile paper having a soft pale green ground patterned with smart wooden soldiers and their ladies promenading up and down. This would make a striking background for maple furniture, and very charming pieces for children can be had in this wood.

The carpet could be a room-size rug—either a Scotch wool rug or what is known as a Seminole carpet in a soft green tone. Before the loveseat (as in the picture) an East Indian mat of camel's hair embroidered in gay colors might be used over the plain carpet.

MOST ANY YOUNGSTER WOULD BE HAPPY IN THIS ROOM, WHERE SO MUCH THOUGHT HAS BEEN GIVEN TO FUN AND COMFORT.

FLOOR PLAN FOR MRS. H.

Of first consideration in equipping the child's room is the question of washability. All fabrics should be simple and easy to launder. Then why not have curtains of crisp organdie that accent one of the lively colors found in the design of the wall paper? The loveseat may have a slipcover of plain sateen, Belgian linen, chintz or Croydon stripe repeating in much deeper tones the color of the curtains, and this same fabric could also be used for the tailored bedspread; or a spread of the candlewick type having an ivory ground and a tufted design in soft green would do very well for a simple maple bedspread. The easy chair may be covered in plain or self-patterned material picking up a second color from the wall design.

One item of furniture which will give unending joy and service to the small boy is the drawing table which we have indicated near the side window where it will receive excellent light. Above the table a fine map in colors would prove interesting as well as instructive. Lamps, waste baskets and other accessories should be in harmony with the scheme, and pictures above the daybed must be carefully chosen, for they are to be used on a figured wall. Generally speaking, pictures of the type that can be framed with generous mats and narrow frames would show to best advantage. In color and subject, of course, they should be in feeling with the room.

For the baby's room in Mrs. H.'s home we would suggest a scheme in soft powder blue and buttercup yellow, which is one of the newer shades for the nursery. Walls and woodwork could be tinted the softest, cloudiest blue; carpeting to be in deeper powder blue; furniture to be painted a soft buttercup yellow. At the windows there may be patterned draperies, perhaps of chintz having a buttercup ground with a little tight nosegay pattern showing lovely blues and corals. The same chintz could be used as a slipcover for the easy chair and the sofa or daybed provided for the nurse. A silken coverlet in delicious tones of pale powder blue put together in one of the shaded modern designs so popular just now would be charming for the crib.

My Dear Miss Zaiss:

I would very much appreciate your assistance in furnishing my six-year-old boy's room. At present I have only a chest of drawers painted a fairly dark shade of green and a youth's bed painted ivory, which I in nd painting green also. The walls are painted buff. I had in mind purchasing a table or a small desk and having some shelves built for toys and books. What are your suggestions as to additional furniture, arrangement of same, floor covering and color scheme. I might mention also that the room is not a very light one.

(MRS.) A. W.

NOW we come to Mrs. W.'s room for her six-year-old son. And it is interesting to note how cleverly many of the features we have been discussing can be varied for her scheme.

With the buff walls it would seem that a Seminole rug in a checkerboard pattern of buff and green would work out nicely. The walls, by the way, should be very light; if they have a tendency to darken the room they should be done over in a clear warm yellow tone.

The daybed should be painted the same color as the chest of drawers. A desk and Windsor chair, a small low table and a small chest for shoes and what-not can be bought unfinished at small cost and painted green to match the other pieces. To balance the cater-cornered window it would be clever to get a corner cabinet with top shelves and a cupboard beneath. This could be painted buff like the walls and woodwork, and the shelf portion lined with a lovely cherry red.

Rather coarse natural linen finished with coarse hand-knotted fringe would make a good bedspread if accented by a few gay cushions that pick up the notes of red and green and deep buff in the room. Use a buff Croydon stripe for the cushion of the window seat, and pillows emphasizing the general color scheme of the room. Cherry colored organdie would be good for the curtains, or if preferred the draperies could be of quaint "Dickens print" or a certain ship print, both of which carry rich notes of green and red on a buff ground. This chintz could also be used for the slip cover for the easy chair.

The lamps could be pewter or brass with parchment shades, and an old map screen would be wonderful for the radiator corner. There should be gay books and toys against the red lining of the cabinet; a globe would be interesting on top of the small chest, and pictures above the daybed should be of romantic and colorful subjects in harmony with the spirit of the room.

We hope mothers and fathers all will enjoy the discussion of these three rooms for very little folks; and, if the plans seem attractive, let them be considered as an invitation for more letters on the same subject.

Scientific Advances

According to a British dental expert future human generations will be chinless and toothless unless more food that requires chewing is eaten.

For matching colors a Massachusetts scientist has invented apparatus to analyze light rays and record them on a chart according to a numerical formula.

With accurate measuring instruments a scientist has found that trunks of pine trees shrink in the daytime and expand at night.

According to a five-year test upon members of the National Academy of Sciences, scientists possess a physique above the average of other men.

According to a Russian scientist, the Arctic islands of Nova Zembla form the most healthful spot in the world, as they are entirely free of disease germs.

Arguments

"BUT why do I have to wear my coat? My sweater's warm enough!"

"No, it isn't. You'll catch cold. Wear your coat."

"I don't want to, and I don't see why I should. You always bundle me up so." Back and forth the words fly! At last, utterly exhausted, mother says, "All right, catch cold if you want to," and Don goes out coatless but gleeful.

"I'm sorry I ever started to give him reasons for doing things," this mother says, trying to find an excuse for her foolish conduct. "He wears me out with his arguments about everything."

Just because this woman is handling the situation badly is no reason to condemn the giving of explanations to a child. Youngsters have a right to explanations! How autocratic, to say in answer to the question, "Why?" "Because I told you to." And suppose giving reasons does lead to arguments? Isn't arguing excellent training for a child? Pitting his intelligence against ours teaches him to think and reason.

But ours is the fault if the youngster learns to use his arguing to wear down our resistance and to have his own way! If the child presents good arguments, thereby winning his case, we should give in gracefully. If, however, we feel convinced that we are right, and that his arguments are invalid, we should be adamant. Why teach a young one to use a trick like this? It is unfair to him and most unwise.

When a child has fully presented his case and is just repeating the same things over and over, I think a parent is justified in saying, "You've already said all that, dear, and if you have nothing further to add, we'll consider the matter closed; and my decision will have to stand." A child handled in this manner quickly learns that there is nothing to be gained by continuing the dicussion.

Children are very clever. They easily learn how to gain their point. Some whine and others plead and still others argue. But why blame the youngsters if we are weak and lacking in self control?

"DAD, where are the electric light canneries?"

"Electric light canneries! What do you mean?"

"Why, the canneries where they put up the juice."

"They don't put up the juice in canneries. They have electric light plants."

"Gee, I'd like to see an electric light plant. They must grow pretty. How do they get the juice from the plants?"

"There are no electric light plants. Electricity doesn't grow."

"But, Dad, you just said they have electric light plants."

"So they do, or factories, if that suits you better. In these factories are huge dynamos which extract the electricity from the air."

"Where do electric plants grow?"

"Oh, go to bed."

IN THE MODERN MANNER

LATE closing statistics indicate that banking houses are in control of every motor manufacturing company except Henry Ford's. This is very glad news to retail consumers of motor cars. They are getting pretty tired of reading the same old automobile ads. They are also weary of reading those performance records and slogans. We wish the bankers would exert their authority and make them advertise their automobiles in the good old financial way:

BESSIE LOVE IN NEW FILM

Director Charles "Chuck" Riesner and the five leading players of Metro Goldwyn Mayer's "Chasing Rainbows" featuring Bessie Love and Charles King, which will open at the Fox-California theater tomorrow served as technical directors for the picture, supervising the details of production.

The six volunteer technicians are veterans of the footlights. They know every aspect of life behind the scenes. They have trouped the country from coast to coast in all kinds of theatrical companies.

When it came to questions of backstage atmosphere in "Chasing Rainbows," a story of a traveling theatrical troupe, the six players knew the answers.

Before coming to the movies, first as an actor and then as a director, Riesner played in vaudeville and dramatic productions in every town in the United States which boasted a population exceeding ten thousand. He knows all about one-night stands, midnight trains and quarreling actors.

Bessie Love, who plays the little comedienne of the show within "Chasing Rainbows" started in motion pictures when she was fresh from high school, but trouped in vaudeville during a dull time in her movie activities.

On the same bill is Fox talking News and Our Gang comedy.

Child Abandonment Charge Dismissed As Woman Claims Baby

LOS ANGELES, April 18. —(UP)— Child abandonment charges against Geraldine Watson, filed when she attempted to gain the return of the baby she had left in a local hotel, were dismissed by the district attorney's office today.

Miss Watson returned from Phoenix, Ariz., to claim the baby two weeks after she had left it with a note saying she would be back. In the meantime, Mrs. G. F. Schaefer, of Portland, Oregon, had claimed the baby as the child of her sister, but later admitted doing so in order to make her husband believe she was a mother.

Mrs. Schaefer has the baby in Portland. Authorities said that Miss Watson would be given an opportunity to place her case before the juvenile court and may be given custody of the child.

SONG HITS IN TALKIE HERE

In "Broadway Scandals," which will be shown at the Fox-California theater today only, a musical comedy, Columbia Piltures corporation has turned out a very creditable picture. From the opening main title until the final fadeout it holds your attention. The dialogue is extremely funny, the dancing is novel and peppy and the tunes are sure song hits.

The leading roles are portrayed by Sally O'Neil, Jack Egan and Carmel Myers. Their characterizations are true to life. Jack Egan, rather new to the talkies, makes the perfect hoofer. His good looks, dancing ability and fine resonant voice carry him through the picture to great advantage. Sally O'Neil gives her usual capable performance.

The story abounds in human touches and is sure to appeal to every type of audience. What is destined to be one of the national song hits is "What Is Life Without Love," the theme melody of the show. Everybody who left the theater was trying to whistle or sing it. You'll like this picture.

Also on the program is a comedy and cartoon.

Tree Survives Nine Droughts

SEATTLE, April 18.—UP—Sacrificed to science, a fine old fir tree today gave assurance that the Puget Sound country is in no danger of drying up.

A woodsman's ax felled this 1000 year old monarch of the Cedar River watershed—the sole survivor of a fire that swept the area 250 years ago.

William Severyns, water department head, became worried over three years of light rainfall and wanted to learn of weather conditions in past centuries.

Ring by ring, within its 10-foot diameter, the tree indicated t had gone through nine periods of drought. Every 100 years, it rings recorded, there were three or four years of drought during which the tree grew little. The rings were close together during those years.

In years of plentiful rains the tree drank deeply and grew rapidly, for the rings were wide and far apart, and rains will fall again, the tree assured.

Sahara Sands Have A Rival

NEPPEL, Wash., April 18.—(UP)—The shifting sands of the Sahara have a rival in those of the country near Neppel.

Surveys made by engineers for the Washington Water Power Co. reveal unusual movements of the sands in this district.

In some cases the sand has covered power poles to a depth of 15 feet, while in other places it has unearthed them, although buried more than six feet.

A gradual movement of the entire sand country is noted and has created an interesting and somewhat costly problem for the power company.

PAINFUL CORNS

Loosen—Lift Out

A little known Japanese herb, the discovery of an eminent German scientist (Dr. Stickel) instantly soothes the corn, callous or wart, then loosens it so that shortly you can lift it right out. This new discovery called "Corn Fly" excites the white blood corpuscles to action and granulates the corn at its root so that it drops out and leaves no trace of scar or soreness.

You will also find "Corn Fly Foot Bath Powder" a boon for sore, tired or perspiring feet.

"Corn Fly" for corns, 35c, "Corn Fly Foot Bath Powder" 25c, and "Corn Fly Bunion Remedy" 50c, (all three—$1.10 value—for $1.00), are sold under a positive money-back guarantee by Hi-Gene Co., Newark, N. J., or local druggist.

SUICIDE HINT IN JULIAN DEATH

LOS ANGELES, April 18.—UP—A secret love affair between a cashier and Robert Bursian, "undercover" investigator for the district attorney's office, who died alone in an automobile crash a few hours before he was to give important grand jury testimony was revealed at an inquest today.

The amorous friendship was described by Miss Adrienna Murray, 20 year old restaurant cashier, who had not known that Brusian was a married man. After hearing her story, the coroners jury returned an open verdict. Though the girl's testimony opened a possibility of suicide.

District Attorney Buron Fitts has pressed the investigation since traces of "knockout drops" were found in Bursian's body. He has expressed a belief that Bursian was done away with to prevent testimony in the Julian Petroleum investigation.

A glass showing a trace of poison was found near the place where Bursian's car went over a 200-foot embanment Monday night.

Miss Murray said that she and Bursian had gone to a theater that night to see "Journey's End." Then they went to her apartment and drank two bottles of wine. She said that Bursian went into the kitchen. When she followed he was holding two bottles. She explained that he remarked that he wondered if he had used the right one because "one holds poison."

The girl said Bursian had been very gloomy and had asked her what she would do if she had only five hours to live, but then had added: "Oh, forget it."

ENFORCEMENT HEAD HINTS CHANGE

WASHINGTON, April 18.—UP—George W. Wickersham, chairman of President Hoover's law enforcement commission, made a guarded statement before the American Society of Newspaper Editors today, revealing that his mind is not closed against modification of the Eighteenth amendment and the dry laws.

"To secure the maximum abstinence from the use of liquor," Wickersham said, "it may be found desirable to modify the Eighteenth amendment or the national prohibition laws." In the same breath he added:

"I express no opinion on that point. Opinions differ. That is a field for discussion."

Meanwhile the lobby committee read a letter from a prominent anti-prohibitionist asserting President Hoover "is beginning to doubt whether prohibition can be enforced." This "impression" gained by Chairman W. H. Stayton, of the association against the prohibition amendment was given in a letter to Charles S. Wood, vice-president of his organization.

Discussing Hoover's attitude, Stayton added: "He wants to take plenty of time to consider it but he is being abused a little too much."

Wickersham's statement puzzled many in view of the statement he made to Congress last month that he believed beer would not solve the enforcement problem because it wasn't enough to satisfy "a robust appetite."

Waiter Succumbs To Travel Lure

SALINAS, April 18.—UP— The lure of the bright lights of Paris, London and Monte Carlo proved too strong for Pierce Hallick.

Pierce recently announced that despite having inherited $2,000,000 from the estate of his father who died recently in France, he intended to keep right on with his job as a waiter in a local restaurant.

But lately Pierce got to reading the travel advertisements, and looking intently at travel news reels, and studying time tables, with the net result that today he hung up his waiter's white jacket and announced that he was heading for France.

Perhaps Mrs. Hallick had something to do with the decision.

Yes, she and the two children are going along.

Cafe Owner In Manslaughter Net

SAN FRANCISCO, April 18.—(UP)—Police today arrested and charged with manslaughter, Clement Gavita, proprietor of a local cafe, following the death of Lawrence Varley, 45, Berkeley sea captain. Varley died as a result of injuries sustained when Gavita allegedly ejected him forcibly from the cafe.

MOUNTAIN BOY KILLER GETS 21 YEARS

BATESXILLE, Ark., April 18.—(UP)— A jury of grizzled mountain farmers found Batesville's handsomest youth. John Barber, guilty today of the murder of the man who married his school-days sweetheart.

The verdict convicted the 22-year old high school football star of second degree murder in connection with the slaying last July 1, of Maurice Osborne. Judge S. M. Bone fixed sentence at 21 years in the state penitentiary.

Mrs. Osborne, 20 years old and herself known as the "belle of Batesville," previously had been sentenced to nine years' imprisonment for her part in the killing of her husband.

Osborne, wealthy young merchant of Cord, Ark., had been a schoolmate of both the girl he married and Barber. All three attended a picnic one day last summer. That night, testimony brought out, Osborne found Barber and his wife together in his home.

Barber confessed that he shot the husband then, but he insisted that he was forced to shoot in self defense.

Mrs. Osborne, at liberty under $7,500 appeal bond, was the principal witness against Barber. She said they had been sweetheartrs before her marriage and carried on their relations after she had gone to live with her husband.

"Barber forced me into our illicit relationship,' testified Mrs. Osborne, "and with his strong will overpowered me into what happened that night.

Young Barber told the jurors that he 'never had a love affair in his life. He charged Mrs. Osborne with doing all the persuading.

Whist Players Refuse Ride In Airplane

Air minded citizens who play whist at benefit parties, were strikingly absent at the Richmond Junior Rifle club whist party in Redmen hall last night.

Or so it seemed—for when the party was over and the lucky winners grouped around to claim their prizes, only two out of eight players eligible for the plane ride offered to accept the first prize.

Mrs. Martha Matt made the high score of the party, but she turned the ride down flat. John Fisi had second high score, and also refused the honor, as did Ben Mayo, and J. H. Zeckeer.

Next in line came Mrs. Daisy Mayo, and she fearlessly accepted the ride.

That still left one ride to be awarded.

J. F. Maskal, having the next high score, was offered his choice of the remaining prizees and the other airplane ride went begging. Mrs. R. Yates, next in line, also refused the air journey.

J. W. Frank next to the lowest of the prize winners and one of the two remaining players to claim prizes, accepted a ride.

Mrs. W. P. Grover accepted the remaining prize and Orren Phillips and Mrs. J. Zecker were given consolation prizes.

Mrs. W. Miller Returned Home

Following two weeks of treatment at the St. Helena Sanitarium, Mrs. W. C. Miller is back at her home at 521 Barrett avenue.

Additional receipt and dispatch mail services will be added to the schedule of the mail service for El Cerrito, starting April 21, according to Mrs. M. L. McNeill, postmaster.

The addition of the schedule will make El Cerrito a third class postoffice, Mrs. McNeill said.

Mrs. Browning Manages Shop

Mrs. Grace Browning, well known veteran worker, has taken over the management of the Richmond Florist, a new floral shop at 2232 Macdonald avenue, and has been busy the past week preparing the Easter flowers.

Mrs. Browning has been a resident of Richmond the last 20 years and has been prominent in veteran circles. She is a past president of the American Legion auxiliary, as well as a past department officer of the lodge.

The new manager is optomistic as to the success of the new floral ship.

"This is a coming location," Mrs. Browning said," and will be doubly successful because of the transient trade the shop can attract."

Mrs. Browning issued a cordial invitation to her many friends to drop in and look over the beautiful flowers that have been obtained for the Easter sales.

CARNERA MAY BE BARRED IN STATE

SAN FRANCISCO, April 18.—UP—Recommendation that Primo Carnera's license to box in California be revoked was made to the California Athletic commission tonight by Charles Traung, commissioner for northern California.

Traung also asked that Frank Churchill, western representative be indefinitely suspended by the commission, that a smilar penalty should be inflicted upon three men who were in the corner of Leon Chevalier, 216 pound negro, when the latter met Carnera at Oakland last Monday night, and that licenses of Carnera's managers be revoked.

The report by Traung was on three typewritten pages and contained a summary of his investigation into the bout, which ended in the sixth round when a towel sailed into the ring from Chevalier's corner while the huge negro was on his feet exchanging punches.

Negro "Framed"

"From the evidence taken as a whole it affirmatively appears that everything was done to prevent Chevalier from winning the contest or even staying ten rounds, by threatening him and doping him with some chemical substance that injured his eye-sight and his wind," Traung said.

"I have no doubt in my mind from the evidence that the action of the second, Perry (Bob Perry who actually threw the towel) was inspired by some person connected with the management of Carnera and the evidence taken at the hearing seems to support no other conclusion."

No Testimony

The only principals in the contest who were not included in Traung's recommendations were the promoter, the referee and Chevalier.

The commissioner said he was unable to find any direct or definite testimony implicating the match maker or the individual fighters themselves 'who under the circumstances were undoubtedly doing their best' and went on to explain he made the recommendations "in the interests of the boxing game and to the end that the sport may be conducted along legitimate lines, free from collusion or suspicion of collusion which is destructive of all sports."

Names Manager

Traung's recommendations were divided into two parts.

In the first he named Tim McGrath, Chevalier's manager, Perry, Chevalier's handler on the night of the fight only, Robert Laga, the negro's chief second and Churchill who is also manager for Tod Morgan holder of the junior lightweight championship for several years and other prominent boxers. These men, he said, should "be indefinitely suspended by the State Athletic Commission from further participation in their respective capacities.

The second clause read:

"That the license of Primo Carnera and his managers be revoked and that Primo Carnera be not allowed to box again in the state of California."

Fighters Paid

Traung ruled that Carnera and Chevalier must be given their full purses, which total about $14,000 and have been held up since Monday, "because there is no evidence that the fighters were not using their best efforts."

A special meeting of the commission will be held here Monday and at that time Traung's message to his associates, William Hanlon and James Woods, will be considered.

In the first part of the report Traung declared that Chevalier was in condition to continue the bout when Perry threw in the towel, that there was no protest from anyone in Chevalier's corner when Referee Toby Irwin halted the count after seeing the towel, that Churchill met and talked with Perry after the latter was engaged as Chevalier's second and that Churchill sat behind the negro's corner during the bout.

S. O. LEAGUE WILL OPEN MAY 7

On May 8, the All-Standards and the Barrel House nine will tangle. All contests will start at five o'clock.

The umpires for this year's Standard Oil league are "Spike" Elder and "Rod" Allen.

The four teams of the league are undergoing a vigorous training schedule during these weeks preceding the opening of the league competition.

The team managers are meeting every noon hour in the Standard refinery cafeteria to even up the rough spots in their lineup. The managers are attempting to eliminate all mediocre material from their squads and scatter the better material in order to speed up the league competition.

For many years the Standard Oil Twilight league maintained a large place in the affections of local baseball fans, and the reawakening of the league has caused great rejoicing among the sporting population of Richmond.

School nurse says all girls should know this

TALKING to a roomful of high school girls on personal hygiene, an experienced district nurse said: "One of the basic rules of health for girls is to keep the system functioning naturally at all times. Normal exercise and diet habits should be encouraged. But when necessary there's no harm in taking nujol, since it works mechanically and can't disturb the normal functions of any organ of the body. Particularly with girls, there are times when nujol should always be taken. Take a spoonful every night for a few days. It's a thoroughly safe and harmless method. It won't cause distress or gas pains or griping." Nujol is different from any other substance. It contains no drugs or medicine. It can be taken safely no matter how you are feeling because it is so pure and harmless, and works so easily. Every woman should keep a bottle on hand. Every druggist has this remarkable substance. SYNOPSIS

Lloyd Wade and Stella Blacknep flee from New Guinea to the South Sea island of Motogaru to avoid Stella's being claimed, following her mother's death, by O'Shane, to whom she is secretly married and whom she fears and loathes. Stella grows to love David but is not free to marry him. She fears that the half-caste girl, Moira, whom they have taken to live with them at her father's dying request, may win David away from her, for the girl is greatly attracted by David. While their first ship is away to Tema, loaded with copra and pearls, Moira learns that David and Stella are not married.

"What—what do you mean?" Stella stammered. She had expected something of the kind, knowing Moira as she did; nevertheless, the bluntness of the question was disconcerting. "How dare you say such a thing!" she flared.

"Because I think it is true. Is it?"

"This is an insult!"

The half-caste came closer. There was a hard, deep brightness in her eyes, and she was breathing a little heavily and unevenly. She looked at Stella searchingly, her eyes narrowed as though she were focusing them on the other's very soul.

"Ah!" said the half-caste. "It is true. It is no use trying to deceive me! I might have known before. I might have guessed. I was a fool. I have been thinking about it all night. I've remembered all kinds of things—small things, things that seemed to mean nothing at the time. People who are not married never behave the same as people who are. They are bound to betray themselves."

"And last night— she had her head on your shoulder."

"This is intolerable! You don't know what you are saying!"

Moira laughed a queer little laugh with a sting in it.

"Oh, I know well enough!"

Stella abandoned the defensive. "What has it got to do with you, anyway?" she said. "Surely we can be allowed to manage our own private affairs?" She said it evenly enough, and wondered at her calm.

The half-caste laughed again, and this time there was in the laugh a little of hysteria and a deal of abandon.

"What has it got to do with me?" she repeated. "Listen; I'll tell you something." She came a little closer. Her chin was out-thrust aggressively and it seemed that the droop of her lower lip had grown more pronounced. "I have often wished he were—what is the word?—eligible. That is it—eligible. He was so exactly the kind of man of my dream and desire—my impossible dream which wasn't so impossible after all! I envied you! I never envied anything so much as I envied you!"

"Stop! Or I'll tell him of this!"

"And what will he think of you?"

"What, rather, will he think of you?"

"I wish you would tell him! You wouldn't look nice. A jealous woman! there is nothing a man hates more than a jealous woman. Go on; tell him. I'm not afraid of the outcome."

Stella felt it was true. She had no real hold on David. He would almost certainly regard her in an unfavorable light. The biblical phrase concerning nourishing a viper in the bosom came to her.

"And this is how you repay all I have done for you!" she said bitterly.

Moira paid no heed to the reproach. In the face of possible realization of her great desire she had become blatant; and the blatancy rendered her immune to reproach. Stella summoned her dignity.

"I don't wish to hear any more," she said, with a coldness she scarcely felt, and went to the door. "And, of course, it is quite impossible that you continue to live here. You will kindly make other arrangements."

Moira turned and took a step towards her; and the manner of her taking the step, and the poise of her, had passion in them.

"Now you're coming the superior white woman over me! You're no different from the rest, after all! You're all the same, the whole lot of you! I'm only a wretched half-caste! And who are you to order me away? It is not only your house. It is his, too, remember! I wonder if he will be a party to making me move! I wonder!" She paused. "David is not like that—like you superior women!"

Stella flinched. The name David on Moira's lips—it sounded vile. Hitherto he had been always "Mr. Wade," and sometimes, playfully, "Uncle." She looked keenly at the half-caste, wondering if she, too, knew that David could be made susceptible to feminine lures.

Retorts stinging and angered jumped to Stella's mind. But she did not voice them. It was not in keeping with the summoning of her dignity.

"And they say only good can come from love!" she cried bitterly to herself. "I would to God I had never known what love was!"

Followed a week of infinite distress. Moira set out with great deliberateness to attract David. As she was open and direct about everything else, so was she open and direct about this. There was nothing subtle or strategic about her. She was neither coquettish nor disingenuous. She either scorned such methods or knew naught of them. All the abandon that was expressed in her walk and sometimes in her voice came out, and she became the barbarian seeking her mate, a splendid, picturesque barbarian determined on attaining her end.

And David seemed to like it. To Stella's disgust and concern, he made no protest or in any way attempted to discourage the half-caste's attentions.

"You are most unreasonable, Stella!" he said once, when, her pride submerged by the flood of her distress, she furiously accused him of becoming unduly fond of the half-caste. "We are only pals. You wouldn't have me be cold and uncivil towards her, would you?—and she fatherless, motherless, and, except for us, friendless."

"Pals! Do you think I don't know what is going on? Pals! Was it merely palship that made her kiss you—on the lips, too—the other night when you came back from bathing?"

"You saw that?"—frowning.

"I was on the veranda, just above you—"

"Spying, eh?"

"I was not"—which was scarcely true. "I was waiting for you to come back to tea. You had been out hours with her, bathing. You go bathing with her every day. And she in a swimming-suit no decent girl——"

"We never stay more than half an hour——"

She knew she had exaggerated; but she didn't stop to retract. She was thoroughly worked up. Words rushed from her in a torrent:

"And what about last night, when she had her arms about you and her head on your shoulder? Just after dinner, it was, on the veranda. She thought I didn't see, or perhaps she hoped I did see. She is like that—blatant, horrible. She has no ordinary decency. And what about—oh, a hundred things. The seemingly accidental way she touches you?—the way she dresses so as to show off the lines of her body?—the way she looks at you? I've seen that look in other women's eyes and know what it means. You talk of being pals——"

Some time later, when calmer, she rebuked herself for making such a scene. She felt she had lowered herself considerably in David's estimation. She wished fervently she had strength to conceal her feelings.

But she could not conceal them, neither could she suffer in silence. She felt that without an outlet she would go mad.

So it was that one evening she again brought up the subject to David, this time from an angle which she hoped he would appreciate. She decided to tell him the whole story. They were alone in the living-room; Moira had gone to the village to talk with the natives, as often she did.

"I never told you before," she began; "but the very first time I met Moira she told me she had a great aim in life. It was to get a white husband."

He was lighting his pipe, and she waited till he had got it drawing strongly.

"Indeed!" he said, as though the matter were of no great interest to him, and dropped the match into one of the beach-shells they used as ash-trays.

"She was mad on it, David. It was an obsession. She said it would give her status, would remove from her the stigma of being merely a half-caste."

FOUR KILLED IN PLANE CRASH

Hudson county went out. As the plane struck the ground it burst into flames and was destroyed.

Pilot Salway lost a courageous but hopeless flight to bring his plane down safely after a flight from Montreal, with a stop in Albany. Nearly an hour he had cruised over Jersey City and its vicinity, sometimes skimming the tops of the tall buildings. Sometimes people on the street could see the plane, even through the fog, so close was it, and there was considerable alarm lest it crash in the street.

Round and round the city the plane circled blindly, while Salway tried to find a landing place. Crowds stood and watched for it and sometime could only hear the plane's engines because of the thickness of the fog blanket.

The plane had left Montreal at noon, and had halted at Albany.

Count de La Vaulx, one of France's most distinguished citizens, had changed enroute to full evening dress, with the red sash of the Legion of Honor across his bosom, preparing to attend a banquet in New York City.

Ending Tour

He was concluding a triumphant air tour of South and North America, during which he had touched at almost every capital in the western hemisphere.

After his arrival from Mexico at San Antonio, Texas, March 24, he went to Washington, where the French ambassador presented him to President Hoover on April 14.

The count started his air tour from Rio de Janiero February 22. He was surveying air routes with a view to the extension of French air services.

The next morning, Miss Carpenter testified Willmot was waiting for her when she left the hospital on her lunch hour. He took her home where she left him, allegedly telling him she was to marry another man.

On going back to work, she stated, she saw his car parked at the corner of Twenty-third and Gaynor avenue, and started to walk by. Willmot jumped out of the car, she said, and she ran into the hospital.

Miss Carpenter declared she did not witness the suicide, nor know anything about it until the body was brought into the hospital.

HALE OPPOSES NEW NAVAL TREATY

general stoppage of work on Good Friday.

The drafting committee, including Ambassador Dwight W. Morrow for the United States, worked throughout the day on the preamble of the treaty, the only part still uncompleted. The preamble was nearly finished when the committee quit its labors tonight.

HALE OPPOSED TO TREATY

WASHINGTON, April 18.—(UP) Chairman Hale of the senate navy affairs committee, today uncovered the first major obstacle to ratification of the London treaty, which is to be signed and made public Tuesday.

The Maine senator demanded for his committee the right to consider and report to the senate upon cruiser clauses in the treaty, which he said had set aside the established policy of congress. Hale referred to American acquiescence of the British proposal that cruisers be divided into two limited groups of large and small vessels.

Meanwhile it was learned that the treaty permitted the United States to immediately begin construction of seven 10,000 ton, 8-inch gun cruisers and three more could be laid down in 1933, 1934 and 1935. Completion of this program would give the United States 18 cruisers of 10,000 tons —the treaty limit. There would remain allocated to the United States 143,000 cruiser tons to be devoted to smalled vessels armed with 6-inch guns.

Hale objected tentatively to the division of cruiser tonnage as it was contrary to Congressional policy and to the position defended by the American delegation at the 1927 Geneva conference when a similar British proposal was rejected by the United States.

Hale's suggestion that his committee, as well as the foreign relations committee consider the naval treaty was made in a speech in the senate.

EASTER LILIES AT WINTER'S

Ranging from Easter lilies to roses and sweet peas, one of the most beautiful assortment of Easter flowers ever seen in this district is now on display at the Adolph Winters Floral Shop at 1031 Macdonald avenue.

Easter lilies, of course, predominate, with tulips and roses of all shades and colors forming a gorgeous background.

Winters declared yesterday that he had delivered more than 100 orders for Easter lilies to Richmond residents, one of which had been ordered by telegraph from Honolulu.

"This," Winters said in referring to the telegraph order, "is one of the benefits accruing from belonging to the floral association. We can send telegraph orders for flowers of any variety to nearly any place in the world and guarantee their being delivered."

Pot roses are also prevalent this year Winters said, and make an attractive decoration for any home.

Winters also announced that he would be open Sunday with a beautiful array of corsages for women. These corsages, Winters declared, will be made principally from lilies of the valley, pansies, gardenias and sweet peas.

Adolph Winters has been in business in Richmond for the past 20 years, starting with a small shop on Fourth street. From the Fourth street location he moved to a store directly across the street from his present location, which he had built seven years ago.

Legge Declares Charges Against Board Good Ads

CHICAGO, April 18. —(UP) — Grain exchanges waging a fight to have the Federal Farm board abolished because of its activities in the wheat market are giving the board some "very excellent advertising," Alexander Legge, chairman, announced upon his arrival here today.

Legge, who came to Chicago from Washington on routine farm board business, was informed the Minneapolis chamber of commerce had launched a nation wide battle against the board and the agricultural marketing act under which it operates.

"It's funny," said Legge, "that they should make so much fuss about something which they said would not operate."

No Reply

He said the board would make no reply to condemnations of it.

"Fact is, we wish them luck," said Legge. "We hope they will have a good time. If they're enjoying it, so are we. We appreciate this good advertising the farm board has been getting."

The Minneapolist chamber sent letters to all grain, produce and commodity exchanges in the country, asking their officials to endorse a resolution which will be submitted to the United States Chambers of Commerce this month. The resolution urges the repeal of the marketing act and condemns the farm board.

Strong Battle

"No line of business is safe if the grain and produce dealers of the country can be destroyed by federal statutes," said the letter, signed by C. T. Stevenson, vice-president and attorney for the chamber.

Legge said there was nothing new about the movement fostered by the Minneapolis body. He said he considered the opposition of no particular importance except in "certain sections of the country where opponents of the board are strong."

"We have been picking up reports of this kind," he said "for the last two months."

Work Starts On Ellis Ship Channel Soon

fore received on city and government projects in the Richmond harbor.

The project is regarded as one of the most important in recent years in the development of shipping and industrial property on Richmond inner harbor.

A large acreage of valuable industrial lands will be filled in during the dredging and a new shipping channel, 4000 feet long, 3000 feet wide and 30 feet deep will be created. The channel in front of the Procter and Gamble site will be only 200 feet wide as the company failed to enter the agreement with the other property owners.

The property owners interested in the project are the Santa Fe railroad company, Richmond Navigation and Improvement company, represented by Captain H. P. Lauritzen; Richmond Investment company and A. Banzoff, represented by Harry W. Wernse; Duncanson and Harrelson, represented by George Calder; Enterprise Foundry company, represented by Charles Hoehn; San Farncisco Bridge company, represented by Fred Muhs.

Youth Killed By Batted Ball

WATSONVILLE, April 18.—UP—"Foul ball! Look out Al," but the warning cry came a little too late. The hard baseball, spinning crazily off the bat, cracked viciously into the head of Alvin Rodriguez, pitching for the sandlot team.

"I'll finish the game," Alvin said, despite the pain and the lump that was rapidly rising from his head.

Alvin pitched his team to victory. That was Wednesday.

Today the bats and balls are put away, as former teammates mourned the loss of the game lad, who died last night at his home from cranial injuries.

NEW FIGHT ON APPOINTMENT LAUNCHED

WASHINGTON, April 18.—(UP) —An attempt to save President Hoover's supreme court nomination of John J. Parker from a close senate fight that might end in his rejection, was launched today.

Senator Overman, Democrat, of North Carolina, and Parker's chief sponsor, announced he will ask the judiciary committee Monday to invite Parker toappear before it to explain his views on labor and the negro. Republican floor leader Watson suggested it, Overman said.

The effect of the appearance of the contested North Carolina depublican would be to defer for a week or so, anyway, the floor battle which administration leaders fear. Furthermore, they hope that Parker's appearance and explanation would show him of such a fair and judicial temperament that the committee and the senate would approve him.

If Parker accepts the invitation, the situation will closely duplicate the battle which led up to the confirmation of Justice L. D. Brandeis, one of the libberal leaders now on the high bench. Brandeis appointment by President Wilson was the subject of judiciary committee debates for several months, and the nominee himself was called before the committee to explain his views and to dissipate the opinions of many that he would be biased in favor of liberal ideas. He succeeded. In Parker's case, however, the elements of race and organized labor prejudice might be much more difficult to overcome.

Chairman Norris, of the judiciary committee, has been opposed to Parker's appearance on the grounds that the hearings by the special overman subcommittee on the nomination have been closed, and no new issues have been brough up. The opposition of labor and negroes was presented there, but it is since the hearings were closed that these two elements have been stirring up menacing political backfires in various of the senators' home states.

During the banquet, which was the feature of the evening, talks were made by each of the past commanders.

Planes 'Bomb' San Francisco

SAN FRANCISCO, April 18.—UP —Five of the largest planes in the U. S. Army air corp dropped eight "bombs" on the downtown district of San Francisco tonight and the attack was described as "highly successful."

It was one of the most spectacular events that has been staged since the annual field exercises started in northern California several weeks ago.

Under command of Major Hugh J. Kneer, the planes took off from Mills field, San Francisco municipal airport, after dark. Each had two pilots and three passengers.

As the center of San Francisco was passed the eight "flashlight" bombs were dropped and brilliantly illuminated the sky. Buildings could be seen as plainly as they are in daylight. Each one of the bombs hit the targets they were intended for, army officers reported.
